IN THE SOCIAL WORLD

Metropolitan Club Gives a Housewarming.

NOTABLE PARTY IS PRESENT

Mrs. Fairbanks Visits Rooms with Col. F. L. Denny—Senator and Mrs. Depey Entertain the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Nabuco at Dinner—Brilliant Party Attend.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. La Farge, of New York, in the White House.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt occupied a box with their guests, last evening, in the National Theatre, to witness the performance of the Aborn Opera Company in "The Wizard of the Nile." Mr. Biglow was also a member of the party.

The rendezvous for society maids and matrons, bachelors and benedicts, both old and young, yesterday afternoon, was the Metropolitan Club, at the continued first part of the entertainment being given last Monday afternoon.

The spacious apartments of the clubhouse were without decorations other than their rich and tasteful hangings and permanent adornments. There was no receiving line, each member of the club being supposed to bring the ladies of his own family, and show them over the club's new home.

Many lingered on the first floor, while the greater number went to inspect the various rooms on the upper floors, carrying on the top floor for sandwiches, teas, and coffee, served in the regular dining room, and punch served in the banquet room opposite.

Among the many distinguished men and women were Mrs. Fairbanks, wife of the Vice President, gowning in pale gray chiffon velvet, made with a short waist effect in the back, and trimmed with soft white lace, and wearing a moderate-sized hat of pale gray, with several lavender plumes. She was escorted by Col. Frank L. Denny.

Others were Stephen B. Elkins, Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Representative and Mrs. Van Vechter, Ofott, Judge Hagner, former Secretary of the Treasury John G. Carlisle, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Boardman and Miss Boardman; Miss Wetmore, Col. and Mrs. Archibald Hopkins, Capt. and Mrs. Flechtmeyer, and Mrs. Rixey, Rev. and Mrs. Roland Cotton Smith, the Misses Harlan, Mrs. Fleming Newbold, Mr. and Mrs. Murray A. Cobb, Dr. and Mrs. Chisholm, of Baltimore; Dr. and Mrs. James Dudley Morgan and their guest, Mrs. Edwin J. Abell, of Baltimore; Representative and Mrs. Joseph Gaines, Miss Sedmore, Miss McCeney, Mrs. Frailey, Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Davis, Dr. Hammond, Rear Admiral Cameron McKee, Winthrop, Mrs. Loe, Lieut. and Mrs. David Foots Sellers, Mrs. Evans, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. R. R. Hoes, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander T. Britton and Mrs. Britton, Mr. Knott, Paymaster and Mrs. Heap, George T. May, and Mrs. C. D. Hancock, Mrs. F. B. Moran and Mrs. Higgins, Dr. Magruder and Miss Pauline Magruder, Mrs. Musgrave, Mrs. Moore, the Commissioner of the District and Mrs. Henry B. F. Macfarland, Mrs. Stuenkel, and Mrs. Benjamin Reeves Russell and the Misses Sessions, Mrs. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Snow, Mr. Francis G. Colton and his daughter, Mrs. Davis, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. William Corcoran Hill, Mrs. Richardson Clover, the Minister from Nicaragua and Mme. Corea, Mr. and Mrs. O'Laughlin, Miss Foraker, Rear Admiral O'Neill, Maj. and Mrs. Charles L. McCawley, Mr. Norman Beator, Rev. Thomas S. Lee, Miss Clarke, Mrs. George M. Pullman, Dr. and Mrs. Pettis, Prof. and Mrs. C. D. Walcott, Mr. Peachy, Mrs. Mattie Carr, Gov. and Mrs. Hoggart, of Alaska; Representative and Miss Wood, Dr. and Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Loring, Mrs. William Barrett Ridgely, Mrs. Morgan G. Bulkeley, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Barbour, and Mrs. Hunt Slater.

The women lingered late with an especial interest in the haunts of the men of their family and of their acquaintances. Particularly interesting to every one was the room furnished by Mr. Larz Anderson as a memorial to his father, Gen. Nicholas Anderson, one of the first, and for many years the most prominent, members of the club.

It was well toward the fashionable dinner hour before the lost group of femininity left the fascinating spot, when the doors were closed permanently upon the fair sex.

Senator and Mrs. Chauncey Depey entertained at dinner last evening in honor of the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Nabuco. Other guests were Mr. Justice Brown, retired, and Mrs. Brown; Senator Gallinger, Senator Carter, Senator Foster, Representative and Mrs. Perkins, Representative and Mrs. J. W. Dwight, Gen. and Mrs. Gillespie, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Rodgers, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. An interesting birthday celebration took place in New York last Saturday, when Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy, Secretary of the Navy under President Benjamin Harrison, was the guest of honor at a dinner given him by his club friends. His birthday cake was lighted with three large candles, which the toastmaster announced significantly, meant "Yesterday, To-day, and To-morrow."

Gen. Tracy's family occupied a conspicuous place in society here for a brief period, when the appalling tragedy resulting in the death of Mrs. Tracy, Miss Tracy, and their maid, in the fire which destroyed their home, overtook him, and in which he nearly lost his own life.

Gen. Tracy spends as little time in Washington since then as possible, never coming except on business.

Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt has left Baltimore for Hot Springs, Va., for a short visit. She remained in Baltimore until after the May Day celebration, which she established there, according to the old English custom.

Because of the severe cold and rain on the last day of May, the festivity was postponed to Saturday. After it was over, Mrs. Vanderbilt entertained a company at luncheon in her home there. Her guests included Mrs. Beckman Lorrillard, well known in Washington society, and a score of New York people, who are at Asheville for the springtime.

PLAYERS AT REUNION

"Prince of Parcheesi" Company Has Good Time.

FAREWELL TO MISS SPOFFORD

Old Songs Are Sung Again, Reminiscences Are Exchanged, Rehearsals for Baltimore Engagement Fall Flat, Old Dances Are Tripped, and a Polka-dot Parasol Goes Astray.

"Happy little maidens we," they sang. It was five of the society chorus girls from the lately defunct "The Prince of Parcheesi" company, gathered in the ballroom at the apartments of Miss R. W. Spofford, who was the dainty and graceful O Kiko San in that show.

For a sort of a reunion of the merry company the call had been issued—that is, invitations had been sent out—to the entire company. But alas! these show people do scatter so! Some of them are in country places in Virginia, others have already gone to the seashore, and yet others are on their way to other lands.

Still, there were enough left so that it looked as if the whole show was there. And there was enough beauty in the ballroom to insure the success of any show.

Girls Wear Costumes.

Some girls came in costume. That helped the merriment. There was Miss Sessions in that striped gingham dress that so successfully hid all curves and made her figure seem all angles. There was the pretty hostess, Miss Spofford, in the beautiful gray kimono with wistaria blooms on it. There were some of the "Dear Little Old-time Girls," as the song designated them, with short frocks and red silk stock. Mrs. Randall Hagner was in costume. And those not in costume looked like show-girls anyway.

Besides being a reunion of the company, the gathering was also for the purpose of bidding Miss Spofford good-by. In two weeks she is off to Europe, where she hopes to study vocal music for a long time, and so be able to come back and be a real prima donna.

There was dancing and jollity and reminiscences of the show. By this time most of the people who worked so hard to make the "Prince of Parcheesi" a success had recovered from the inevitable reaction. They went at the old songs and dances again with renewed vim and energy.

Miss Garlington Loses Parasol.

There was Miss Alice Godwin, beautifully suborned from a Virginia house party, who last night in the cakewalk was so energetic she was in the air most of the time. And there was Miss Sally Garlington, who had a lovely time until she discovered her pretty polka-dot parasol was missing, and refused to be consoled.

Here is a free want ad:
LOST—ONE SILK PARASOL, WHITE, WITH polka dots. Please return to Miss SALLY GARLINGTON and receive reward of merit.

Of course, Mr. Percy Leech, the man who directed the show, was at the rehearsal. He was the author of the music presented at the piano. There has been some talk of taking the show over to Baltimore for one performance. So Mr. Leech said: "Come on. Let's have a rehearsal for Baltimore."

As the familiar music struck up only about half a dozen of the original opening chorus got in line and sang: "Happy Little Maidens, We." As the author of the music presided at the piano. There has been some talk of taking the show over to Baltimore for one performance. So Mr. Leech said: "Come on. Let's have a rehearsal for Baltimore."

There the rehearsal stopped. "I'm not going to take this bunch to Baltimore if they can't sing better than that," said the director. That ended the prospects of the show.

But there was lots of fun. For the nonce Miss Spofford became O Kiko San again and sang "Down on My Smiling Island," and was applauded again and again. The same happy chorus that sang it in the show sang "Dear Little Old-time Girl," and did the dance, too, although most of them had on long trains that got sadly in the way of the kicking part of the dance.

Chorus Sang by Every One.

Phil Scantling sang his song, "The Land I Love," and every one joined in the chorus. And George O'Connor sang those negro melodies that made such a hit with the show. When it came to the chorus, "Candy Mountain Time," the whole party joined in the cakewalk. As the Bingville Bugle says, "A good time was had."

The party was increased late in the evening when the Misses Slack and others came in fresh from the circus, and other stragglers arrived from the theater. But Miss Spofford's party is probably the last echo of "The Prince of Parcheesi," the most successful amateur play ever given by Washington society folk. And the show won't go to Baltimore. And it is all over but a delightful memory.

Those of the "old guard" who were present last night were the Misses Sally Garlington, Polly Mason, Ruth Halford, Eleanor Ridgely, R. W. Spofford, Alice, Helen, and Vera Downing, Mary and Addie Slack, Marcy Curtin, Alice Goodwin, Elizabeth Goodwin, Mrs. Earle, Alice Sheppard, Edith Sutherland, Marguerite Woodward, Anna Porter, Marguerite Morse, Miss Miller, Jean Loring, Mrs. Randall Hagner, and Mrs. George Wheeler.

The winners were: Messrs. Allen Craig, Robert C. Mason, Dr. Paul Evans, Milton Lusk, Kendall Evans, Percy Leech, Harry Hunkins, Melville Church, Chauncey M. Sincerbeaux, Franklin B. Green, Robert Stead, Britton Brown, Le Roy Gould, Sheldon Wardwell, Edward Cady, Jr., Hamilton Baxter, Harry Crist, Leonard Nickerson, Orville Ecker, and Philip Lee Scantling.
